RADIOTHERAPY CANCER TREATMENT

DescriptionPrices & PromotionsWithdraw reportBook Service

The London Clinic radiotherapy department uses the world's most up-to-date technology to provide the most advanced treatments possible for our patients. Clinical Radiotherapy staff use two Varian linear accelerators that deliver a wide range of external beam radiotherapy. All treatments are given using Image Guided Radiotherapy (IGRT) and treatments such as Intensity Modulated and Volumetric Arc Therapy (IMRT and VMAT or RapidArc) are standard for many patients.

We are also able to successfully treat a wide range of tumours using respiratory gating. Deep inspiration breath hold (DIBH) is the technique we use for left side breast cancer. The technique of end expiration breath hold (EEBH) is used for tumours in the abdomen and thorax including pancreas, lung and oesophageal cancer. The London Clinic is the only hospital in the UK to use the Gated

RADIONUCLIDE THERAPY

Radionuclide therapy uses radioactive isotopes (radionuclides), administered either orally or intravenously, to deliver highly targeted therapy for a range of disorders, enabling the delivery of a high dose to the target, while minimising normal-tissue toxicity.

Radionuclide therapy, also known as isotope therapy or more recently molecular therapy is used to treat a range of cancers, as well as some non-cancerous diseases.

ELECTROCARDIOGRAM (ECG)

An ECG measures the electrical activity of your heart that causes it to beat. The test can be used to check whether your heart is functioning properly, or whether there may be damage to it as a result of drugs, devices such as pacemakers, an existing heart disorder such as an irregular heartbeat, or a past heart attack.

During an electrocardiogram, a machine called an electrocardiograph records the electrical activity of your heart muscle and translates this as a pattern on a computer screen or on paper. If your heart is functioning normally, the ECG will have a characteristic pattern, while any irregular heartbeat will change the shape of the pattern produced.
